

July 01, 2008

Nana Star

Not too long ago a box was delivered to my house, and as I was opening it I found a bunch of curious faces come running to check it out. I first pulled out a cute little girl doll, which brought a smile of joy to Trinity's face. Next I pulled out a little yellow man with blue clothing. Samuel seemed to know that it was destined for him, and he squealed as he ran to me to claim Moonman for himself.

Nana Star is a sweet girl who stars in two books so far, where she learns virtue lessons from other sources, such as Moonman.

Moonman is a great little plush doll that lights up and plays a sweet song that does not get annoying, like so many other toys. I love the bright light, but only wish the music would play longer. Nana Star is a poseable plush doll with a couple of accessories, and she faithfully goes with Trinity all over the place. Trinity and Sam love having the characters in the book to cuddle with, and having stories about their toys help give them a character to love even more.

The Nana Star books are lovely stories and come with a CD with the story and sing-a-long music. My kids love to have Grandma read the books. Over and over and over. But the CD's would be great for road trips or for nap times if your child has a CD player in their room.

Here is a video of one of the books, it is very sweet. You can purchase the book at Amazon here.

You can go to their blog and enter for a chance to win the whole set by telling your best lemons to lemon-aid story!